Will Have an Instructor.

At the meeting of the school board on Monday evening it was decided to engage an instructor for the high school orchestra, and it is entirely probable that Charles Warr, the leader of the orchestra will be engaged for the position.

The high school orchestra has been in existence several years and considering the lack of advantages they have had they have done very well. However, there are few, if any, children of high school age who are capable of heading a musical organization of mixed instruments and getting anything like good results from it, even the each individual may be capable of playing his part in a fairly good style. The presence of a competent director will enable them to handle a grade of music that they could never before attempt and should produce results that are gratifying.

Another feature about the high school orchestra is the fact that during all the time the organization has been in existence the members have been playing almost exclusively for school entertainments, contributing their share toward the success of the event, and those who have kept track of the matter feel that the children are entitled to some encouragement. It is certainly a good move and will do a great deal toward developing the musical talent of the children.

Tied With Normal Team.

The Grand Rapids high school football team went to Stevens Point on Saturday and played a tie game with the Normal boys of that city the score being 0 to 0.

In speaking of the game the Stevens Point Journal says: The Stevens Point Normal and Grand Rapids high school football teams met at the fair grounds today and gave the large audience present a very fair sample of football. The score at the close of the game was 0 to 0, the tie being suggestive of the comparative merits of the teams.

Both teams were lacking in team work and many short gains could have been turned to good account by the interference on the part of the runner's support. As a matter of fact the runner in nearly every instance had to stand the entire brunt of the attack of the opposition. The home team was also criticized somewhat on its tactics the attack being made so high as to be more or less dangerous as well as often ineffective. For a high school team the Grand Rapids boys put up a good game. They are quite heavy for a team of that grade and compared favorably in weight with the Normals. This was the second game of the season for both teams, and the inexperience probably accounted for a noticeable lack of ginger.

The line-up follows: Grand Rapids Wilson, Wagner, Hill, Grover, Davis, Berg, Carleton, Palmer, Farnester, G. Arpin, Collins, G. Arpin, McDill, G. Arpin, Biehoff, G. Arpin, Cronus, Hill, G. Arpin, Earley, Hughes, G. Arpin, Smith, Sub-Grand Rapids, Brown, Schroeder and Natwick.

Coldest of the Season.

O. G. Maide, keeper of the experimental station at Grandmoor, reports that mercury registered only seven above zero on Monday night at the station. It was quite a heavy freeze and icy cranberries that were not under water were probably damaged very materially. It did not need a thermometer to tell the average person that it was freezing on Monday night, but few would suspect that it was as cold as the record showed.

Mrs. J. E. Noyes will leave today for Milwaukee with her son Henry who will be placed under the care of Dr. Hayes to be operated on for some trouble with one of his ears.

NEINFELDT PLEADS

Charge is Changed to Manslaughter in the Fourth Degree and he Pleads Guilty.

The case against Albert Neinfeldt was brought to a termination on Tuesday by the charge being changed to manslaughter in the fourth degree and the defendant pleading guilty to the charge.

It was expected by many that there would be another long drawn out case over this matter with possibly another disagreement of the jury in the end, and everybody interested is well satisfied with the outcome of the case.

Most people are familiar with the details of the case as it was thrashed out in the last term of the circuit court. Neinfeldt and his brother-in-law got into a row in a saloon at Nekeos, and during the mixup, Marsh was either struck with an iron candlestick or knocked to the floor so violently that his skull was fractured, and he later died from his injuries. It was evident from the testimony that Neinfeldt had no intention of killing his brother-in-law, and those who heard the case tried out, were of the opinion that he could not be convicted of the charge of murder.

Judge Webb did not announce his decision in the matter but it is supposed that the man will be released with a fine. In fact the judge announced that it would be a reasonable fine, altho the amount was not stated.

Douglas Pleads Guilty.

Paul Douglas, the man who was charged with assault with intent to commit great bodily harm, on Tuesday pleaded guilty to the charge. His partner, Edward Davis, was discharged.

The two men were being taken out of the city by Chief Carlisle when Douglas drew a razor and tried to cut the officer. Luckily he missed him, and before he could do any damage he was knocked down and the weapon taken away from him.

Sentence has not been passed on him as yet but will be done at the end of the term.

Death of Mrs. Virum

Mrs. John Virum died at her home on the west side on Monday, cause of death being dropsy. She had been sick for about a year and had been a great sufferer before death came to relieve her. She is survived by her husband and three children.

The funeral will occur on Friday from the Second Moravian church, Rev. Ch. Madsen officiating.

Halvorsen-Moberg.

This afternoon at two o'clock, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. B. Halvorsen, occurred the marriage of their daughter, Clara, to Godfrey Moberg, Rev. C. Madsen performing the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Mattie Halvorsen while August Moberg acted as best man.

Both of the young people are well and favorably known in this city where they have a large circle of friends who will join with the Tribune in extending congratulations. After a short wedding trip the newly married couple will return to this city to make their home.

Park Enlarged

The park commissioners have purchased the piece of property next to the Christian Science church for the purpose of enlarging the park near the library. At the last meeting of the council that body left the purchasing of this property to the discretion of the commission. The property will add greatly to the park as it lies right between the park and the church.

The Woman's Relief Corps of this city will entertain the Woman's Relief Corps of Stevens Point on Thursday afternoon. It is expected that fifteen or twenty ladies will be present from the Point to take part in the festivities.

Were in a Wreck

Mr. and Mrs. Will Nash returned on Tuesday from their wedding tour, after being absent a couple of weeks visiting at various points of interest. On Monday while on their way home they were mixed up in a railway wreck near Eau Claire, from which they both escaped with only a few bruises.

Their train was running along about thirty miles an hour when it ran into a freight coming from the opposite direction. There was a terrific jar and the passengers were hurled from their seats and instantly everything was confusion. Mrs. Nash struck the window with her arm and sustained a severe bruise, but no bones were broken, while Will's nose came in contact with the seat ahead of him but not hard enough to break any bones. The other passengers were pretty badly cut up, and the experience was anything but a pleasant one for those who participated.

A Bicycle Accident

Dominick Reiland was quite severely injured this morning while riding his wheel down Main street, by being run into by another man on a wheel. Mr. Reiland was knocked senseless by the impact and he was picked up and carried into the Dixon house where he was given medical assistance. Upon examination it was found that his nose had been broken by the collision and he had sustained several other cuts and bruises, none of which are serious enough to be dangerous. The other party in the mixup was not injured.

Park Week a Success.

The plan inaugurated by the members of the Federated Clubs for the fixing up of the library park on the east side has proven quite a success so far as a number of men and teams have donated their services to the plan and considerable work has already been accomplished.

On Tuesday the Junior and Senior classes at the high school turned out for a part of the day and lent a hand, and the ladies of the Federation have served coffee and sandwiches to those who were at work. The plan will be continued the remainder of the week and there is still time to get into the game.

The Satisfaction of Getting the Right Suit.

GENERALLY speaking, clothes selection is more or less of a lottery: Maybe you'll get a good one. More than likely you'll draw a poor one, because such a large proportion of clothes are "doctored up" with the flat-iron to cover defective making, and the first dampness shows these clothes up for what they really are. The safe and sane way is to buy clothes with a quality reputation.

Sincerity Clothes—quality clothes will give you the limit of satisfaction in permanent shape and long service. Don't cost any more either. You'll find the right suit here all right. Try it.

Marriage of a Former Resident.

Harry Miller, who formerly lived here, and who is well known to our citizens, was on Wednesday last married to Miss Olive Kempton Beaupre of Aurora, Ill. The following concerning the wedding is taken from the Aurora Daily News:

A wedding of note was celebrated in Aurora last night when Miss Olive Beaupre, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Beaupre, of 230 South Lincoln avenue, became the bride of Harry Edward Miller of Chicago. The ceremony was attended by one hundred and sixty friends of the families, occurred at 8 o'clock and was performed by Dr. W. A. Colledge, of Evanston, formerly pastor of the Peoples' church in Aurora.

The apartments at the beautiful Beaupre home were transformed into a bower of loveliness, the appointments being green asparagus ferns, white roses and ferns. The bride and groom stood in front of the first place in the living room, where an altar of asparagus ferns had been tastefully arranged.

As the bride-elect approached the altar where she was met by the groom-elect, Miss Alice Doty played Lohengrin's wedding march. Miss Beaupre was attended by her bridesmaids, Miss Georgia Kelley, of Helena, Mont., and Miss Gertrude Corney, of Worcester, Mass. They were given in handsome creations of pink and white gowns and carried pink roses. Mrs. Charles Powell, the bride-elect's sister, was matron of honor, and Mr. Miller was attended by George Booth, of Chicago.

Miss Beaupre approached the altar on her father's arm, through an aisle of white ribbons stretched by Mrs. John Harris, of Port Dodge, Ia., formerly Miss Margaret Mason, and Mrs. Frank Belton, cousin of the bride. As the bride and groom were leaving the altar, Miss Alice Doty rendered the wedding march from Mendelssohn.

Miss Beaupre wore a gown of white satin surplice and a veil which was fastened by a wreath of lilies of the valley. She carried a shower bouquet.

Following the marriage rites, an elegant supper was served by Morse, of Chicago. The balance of the evening was spent in sociability and dancing, and for the dance program, Donnelly's orchestra furnished splendid music.

Mr. and Mrs. Miller left last evening for a two weeks' wedding trip through the east and upon their return will make their home in one of the Donnelly cottages in South Lincoln avenue.

The bride is one of Aurora's favorite daughters. She was born here and has always made this city her home. She is a graduate of the East Aurora high school and Smith college and later taught in the East Aurora high school. She is also a niece of Arthur M. Beaupre, United States Minister to the Argentine Republic, with headquarters at Buenos Ayres.

Mr. Miller is recognized as one of Chicago's progressive young business men and is the Illinois representative for the D. Appleton Publishing company, with headquarters in Chicago. He has many friends in Chicago and Aurora who find in him a man of sterling quality. Mr. and Mrs. Miller received many and costly presents from their friends.

The Finance Committee of the City of Grand Rapids, Wis., to whom had been referred the foregoing report of the City Treasurer, presented the following report which was, on motion, accepted.
"Grand Rapids, October 1st, 1907.
To the Honorable Mayor and Common Council of the City of Grand Rapids, Wis.
Gentlemen:—We, the undersigned members of the Finance Committee of the City of Grand Rapids, Wis., in compliance of checking the report of City Treasurer Stahl for the year ending May 1st, 1907, beg leave to report as follows: That we have checked over the several items in the report and have compared the orders paid with the stubs and have cancelled the orders.
We find that the sum paid out by the Treasurer together with the sum on hand in the Bank on May 1st, 1907, amounts to $7,837.78, the same as the amount of cash in the Bank on May 1st, 1907, making a credit to the Treasurer of the amount of $3,822.
However, we find by the Treasurer's report that he takes credit with $160.54 for uncollected Personal Property tax and an examination of the Tax roll shows uncollected Personal Property Tax to the amount of $148.13. Thus the amount of $11.41, deducted from this debit of $148.13, as shown in the report of the Treasurer should be added to the credit of the City to balance the account.
Respectfully submitted,
H. J. Jackson,
H. F. Rislow,
C. E. Bossett,
Committee.

THE HOUSE OF A THOUSAND CANDLES

"I think you are quite right, sir," said Bates. He then turned and looked over the edge of the long table that lay on its side, his gaze still bent on Pickering, who stood with his over-shouldered close, his derby hat in his hand, his eyes fixed on the floor beside him, where it had fallen as Bates had him into the room.

The sound of a measured step, of one on a staircase, was quite distinct. I have remarked the slight stumble that had noticed before.

We were all so intent on those steps that the wall that we were off guard. I saw Bates yell warily, and Larry and Stoddard rushed for Pickering. He had drawn a revolver from his vest pocket and was about to fire at him when Stoddard sent a warning yelp through the air.

"Only a moment now, gentlemen," said Bates, an odd smile on his face. He was looking past me toward the light end of the fireplace. There seemed to be in the air a feeling of something impending. Even Morgan and his men, hitherto ready for a rush at me, hesitated, and Pickering glanced nervously from one to the other of us. It was the calm before the storm; in a moment we should be at each other's throats for the final struggle, and yet we waited. In the wall I heard still the sound of steps. They were close to all of us now. We stood there for what seemed an eternity—I suppose the time was really not more than 30 seconds—then, waiting, while I felt that something must happen; the silence, the waiting, were intolerable. I grasped my pistol and bent low for a spring at Morgan, and very close in the room was instantly in the air.

All that Bates. He remained rigid—that curious smile on his blood-smeared face, his eyes bent toward the end of the great fireplace back of me. That look on his face held, arrested, dumbfounded me. I followed it. I forgot Morgan; a faint trace held us all against the wall. Bates' eyes were fastened on the broad paneled chimney-breast at the right of the hearth, and it was here now that the sound of footsteps in the wall was heard again; then it ceased utterly, the long panel opened slowly, creaking slightly upon its hinges, then down into the room stepped Marian Devereux. She wore her dark gown in which I had seen her last, and a cloak was drawn over her shoulders.

She laughed as her eyes swept the room. "Ah, gentlemen," she said, shaking her head, as she viewed our disorder, "what wretched housekeepers you are!" Steps were again heard in the wall, and she turned to the panel, held it open with one hand and put out the other, waiting for some one who followed her. Then down into the room stepped my grandfather, John Marshall Glenarm. His staff, his cloak, the stick that above his shrouded face, and his black eyes were unmistakable. He drew a small handkerchief from the skirts of his frock coat, with a characteristic flourish that I remembered well, and brushed a bit of dust from his sleeve before looking at any of us. Then his eyes fell upon me.

"Good morning, Jack," he said; and then gazed with mild curiosity about the room.

"Can you help us?" It was Morgan, I think, who screamed these words as he bolted for the broken door, but Stoddard caught and held him.

"Thank God, you're here, sir!" broke forth in Bates' supple voice. It seemed to me that I saw all that happened with a weird, unnatural distinctness, as one sees, before a storm, vivid outlines of far horizons that the usual light of day fails to disclose.

I was myself dazed and spellbound; but I do not like to think, even now, of the effect of my grandfather's appearance on Arthur Pickering; of the shock that seemed verily to break him in two, so that he staggered, then collapsed, his head falling back, his arms flung out, his hands clutching the collar and dragged him to a seat, where he huddled, his twitching hands at his throat.

"Gentlemen," said my grandfather, "you seem to have been enjoying yourselves. Who is this person?"

He pointed with his stick to the sheriff, who was endeavoring to crawl out from under the mass of broken crystal.

"That, sir, is the sheriff," answered Bates.

"A very disorderly man, I must say, Jack, what have you been doing to cause the sheriff so much inconvenience? Didn't you know that that chandelier was to be killed?"

That, sir, was the cost of a thousand dollars. Gentlemen, you are expensive visitors. Ah, Morgan, and Ferguson, too!

Well, well! I thought better of both of you. Good morning, Stoddard! A little work for the church militant. And this gentleman," he indicated Larry, who was for once in his life, without exception, silent.

"Mr. Donovan—a friend of the house," explained Bates.

"Pleased, I'm sure," said the old gentleman. "The house has a friend. It seems to have had enemies enough," he added, and eyed the wreck of the chandelier, which lay in his hand, as if he had just stepped in it.

"And Pickering?" John Marshall Glenarm's voice broke with a quiet firmness that I remembered as the preface usually of something unpleasant. "Well, Arthur, I'm glad to see you, but guarding, defending the interests of my estate. At the risk of your life, too!"

"Yes, Mr. Glenarm."

"You ought to have called me earlier. I really prized that chandelier immensely."

SEEK TREASURE OF LAFITTE.

Its Hiding Place Has Been Pointed Out in Dreams of Ghosts.

Since the French privateer and smuggler, Jean Lafitte, called the high seas and brought his treasures to the Gulf coast and buried them now and then it happens that some sensation arises as to their immediate whereabouts, says the Houston Post.

Thirty-four years ago the pirate of the Gulf, as Lafitte was called, appeared in a dream to Dr. Beazly, and, rather roughly taking him by the collar, told him to come with him and he would show him where there were gold and silver and diamonds buried. The doctor in his dream followed his midnight visitor and he directed him to a certain place in the cottage, which was then the Beazly home and occupied by the family, and designated the spot under which lies the much-talked-of wealth of the privateer.

The doctor, having the same dream repeated twice in the same night, became wide awake after Lafitte's third visit, and much interested, he set out to find the treasure.

After getting to the depth of four or five feet he found nothing of any moment except a very unusual stone in this part of the world, where no natural education. Bates, gave me a chair."

The man gravely drew a chair out of the wreckage and placed it upon the hearth. My grandfather stepped upon it, seized one of the bronze sconces above the mantel and gave it a sharp turn. At the same moment, Bates, upon another chair, grasped the companion bronze and wrenched it sharply. Instantly some mechanism creaked in the great oak chimney-piece, and the long oak panels swung open, disclosing a steel door with a combination knob.

"Gentlemen," and my grandfather turned with a quiet touch of humor, and a merry twinkle in his bright old eyes—"gentlemen, behold the treasure!"

None such now. Morgan's superb collection in his London town house, said a New York despatch, "were opened to a few of us during our summer convention at the South Kensington Museum."

Among Mr. Morgan's treasures there was an old book that I liked for its quaintness. This book, which was splendidly bound, was Hopton's 'Concordance of Years.' It was a chronology of remarkable events and I copied a few of these events down. We have none such now. Listen.

The decorator then said: 1213. The moon seemed turned into blood.

1223. Four suns appeared, beside a true sun, of a red colour.

1631. Fiends were seen speak unto men as they traveled.

1401. A red bird with a girl's head seen thrice in London.

1477. A blinding star on Palm Sunday near the sun.

From Prehistoric Days. The burial place of an adult, probably of the Stone Age, was excavated in the island of Corsica, one of the Hebrides.

The body had been placed in the smallest possible compass on its right side, with knees drawn up to the chin, but rather bent downwards. The relics around and upon the skeleton are in harmony with the theory, deduced from the position in which the body had been placed, that the burial belongs to a very early period.

The condition of the bones and the relics is so good that they could be readily set up in a museum in the original position. Discoveries have also been made recently in the Island of Corsica. An important find was that of a set of 30 small, finely-made flint implements, probably of the Bronze Age.

The objects include one of the most beautifully-made flint arrow points, of a type more common in Ireland than Scotland.

He Was Interested. "It was so kind of you to see me home," she said. "I hope the trip has not been very tiresome to you."

"Oh, no, not at all, not at all," he replied. "In fact, it has been rather interesting."

"You cannot know how glad you have made me. Do you really mean it? Mr. Worthwell? I shall be delighted to have you come over to-morrow evening? I felt the first time I ever saw you that we were destined to become—"

"Excuse me, Miss Olden. I am afraid I don't quite understand. I have found the trip interesting because I supposed we had the most foolish of cars and the most foolish of people."

"I've rounded those panels a dozen times," I protested.

"Of course you have," said my grandfather, "but solid steel behind wood is safe. I tested it carefully before I left."

He laughed and rapped the floor with his staff, and I laughed with him. "But you found the Door of Bewilderment and Pickering's notes, and that's something."

"No, I didn't even find that. Donovan deserves the credit. But how did you ever come to build that tunnel, if you don't mind telling me?"

He laughed tellingly.

TO SPREAD THEOSOPHY

Mrs. Katherine Tingley, High Priestess, Will Establish Home in England Similar to That at Point Loma in California

London.—Mrs. Katherine A. Tingley, high priestess of Theosophy, arrived in London with three great esoteric objects in view: To discredit the claims of Mrs. Annie Besant, the founder of the modern theosophical school of philosophy; to rehabilitate the memory of the late William Q. Judge of New York, who has been denounced by Mrs. Besant as a charlatan, and to establish in the heart of the New Forest, near Ringwood, a theosophical academy similar to that maintained by Mrs. Tingley at Point Loma, Cal. Through lack of funds, if not through lack of personality, Mrs. Besant's grip upon English theosophists has been gradually waning, and for some time past the advocates of esoteric culture have sorely felt the need of an enthusiastic leader, who, with a power to make converts, should bring a new life to the depleted coffers of the society.

Her work in New York, in Cuba and California has shown, so certain English Theosophists think, Mrs. Tingley to be such a leader. When required had to be brought, while on the west the Sierra Madre mountains filled the background to the sky.

This desert place has now become a semicircular garden, studded with 50 buildings of ancient Aztec architecture, including residences, an academic grove, and an amphitheatre all overlooked by an Aztec temple with an amethyst dome. Here was established the Raja Yoga school—an institution which professes to give students an equal balance of mental, physical and spiritual education.

As the fame of the school spread the number of students multiplied, and pilgrimages were made to the place from many lands. There were persons who hoped to find in Theosophy relief from the pains, palps, and doubts of human life. As time passed, however, the number of million-aires, actors, and ministers fell together, the curriculum was increased although it never departed from its original elemental foundation of hygiene, music, the fine arts, and languages, and, of course.

The great feature of all successful work is organization. The organization has been the production of remarkable results, which, I believe, are superior to those achieved by education on ordinary lines. Duty is the first principle taught, but its benefit is taught with understanding. While the practical side of life is not taught, its advancement is not taught by an understanding of what may be achieved by beauty, sweetness and light.

Her First Shot at Mrs. Besant. "The organization is not in any way associated with the society with which Mrs. Annie Besant is connected. I hold that Theosophy is based on common sense, is practical, and can be applied to everyday life, and is contrary to the teaching of the contrary one is found teaching without giving the practical demonstration, that person is not necessarily to be relied upon as a teacher or benefactor. Ambition and love of power may be more to such a one than the claims of humanity."

"When Mrs. Blavatsky first started her great movement she appealed to all classes of minds, but some of her teachings have been unfortunately distorted by fanatics. In spite of the untiring efforts of Mrs. Blavatsky and William Q. Judge, her successor, there are still those teaching Theosophy who, according to my philosophy, confuse the public mind. This is the simple and beautiful teachings of Theosophy obscured and rendered ineffective when applied to practical life."

Lively Times Looked For. Thus Mrs. Tingley delivered her first shot at Mrs. Besant and for the memory of W. Q. Judge. So far no response has been made. The silence, however, is regarded as a calm before the storm. For Mrs. Besant still has adherents in London who look upon Mrs. Tingley as a usurper, and Mrs. Besant's strong hand is certain of a knowledge of facts in certain lines of which Mrs. Tingley is ignorant.

Four months ago the Point Loma school was in full enjoyment of its spring session, when two important items of news arrived. One was that some friends of two devoted Swedish students, Mrs. A. Walker Hanson, and Miss Margaret Hanson, had bought a tract of the society a large tract of land adjoining the Royal Forest in Sweden. The other was that the Hon. Nan Herbert's father had died in December, leaving her in possession of his estate.

Quick Success at Point Loma. Success early crowned the efforts of Mrs. Tingley at Point Loma. The place was little more than a desert promontory inhabited by jack-rabbits and rattlesnakes. On the east it was washed by the Bay of San Diego, across which all the building material

Walker Hanson, and Miss Margaret Hanson, had bought a tract of the society a large tract of land adjoining the Royal Forest in Sweden. The other was that the Hon. Nan Herbert's father had died in December, leaving her in possession of his estate.

Quick Success at Point Loma. Success early crowned the efforts of Mrs. Tingley at Point Loma. The place was little more than a desert promontory inhabited by jack-rabbits and rattlesnakes. On the east it was washed by the Bay of San Diego, across which all the building material

Four months ago the Point Loma school was in full enjoyment of its spring session, when two important items of news arrived. One was that some friends of two devoted Swedish students, Mrs. A. Walker Hanson, and Miss Margaret Hanson, had bought a tract of the society a large tract of land adjoining the Royal Forest in Sweden. The other was that the Hon. Nan Herbert's father had died in December, leaving her in possession of his estate.

tate in the New Forest. The beneficiary at once turned this property over to the society.

The School in the New Forest. After much deliberation Mrs. Tingley, with the co-operation of Mrs. Herbert and the Hansons, decided to establish in the New Forest and in Sweden theosophical schools similar to that so successfully maintained at Point Loma. Mrs. Herbert and the Hansons will proceed to Sweden to carry out one part of the program, while Mrs. Tingley, now known as the Purple Lotus Mother, just as Mrs. Blavatsky was described as the White Lotus Mother, will remain in England for the purpose of establishing the school in the New Forest, to demonstrate her position as head of the society over Mrs. Besant, and, as has been said, to rehabilitate among English Theosophists the memory of Mr. Judge of New York, whom Mrs. Besant had maligned.

Mrs. Tingley had not been a day in London before she reported to the Esoteric headquarters of the "Universal Brotherhood Organization, International Brotherhood League, and Theosophical Society." Her reception there was probably caused Mrs. Besant to declare that there have been traitors in her camp, for the Purple Lotus Mother was received and acclaimed as the only one and true head of the Theosophical society.

Supplanted English Leader. Figuratively and literally speaking, Mrs. Besant's picture was found turned to the wall, and those who were supplanted by Mrs. Tingley as a deity, room around Santa Barbara, and then by Mrs. Besant, a room here and there, until the early part, such as London, today, between the heights of industry and the heights of idleness, was a constant battle before his death, and December, he constructed an observatory tower, which today bears an unimpaired witness to the accumulation of his labor, within a little lecture hall, surrounded by tall elms and poplars, the vanished host lives at a distance.
